What I particularly liked about the VU is the personal and professional support of the faculty. You can assign yourself a mentor from the specialists in your field, who will help you design your Masters programme and find your way in academia.” Wouter de Vries, Student of the Global History programme.

You are encouraged to make use of the staff’s intensive network of heritage institutions, governmental organizations, NGO’s, and business partners, to set up embedded research projects as a stepping stone for the next step in your career. We offer a dynamic international context where students from the Netherlands and from abroad exchange views and experiences.

CAREER PROSPECTS
Investing in a research master has proved to be very profitable for our students over the years. You can continue as a PhD student, embark on a career at a research institute, a teacher, journalist, text writer, heritage expert, or an advisor for the government or NGO’s.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS
Applicants must have a Bachelor’s degree in history, European studies, anthropology, political sciences, or a related academic degree. The student should also have a proficient level of academic English, proof of excellent study results (7.5 average) and a clear motivation for academic research.

The Global History programme is aimed at talented students who are exceptionally motivated to do historical research. You will learn to investigate the dynamics and long-term developments of the global interconnection of goods, ideas and people, and the role of power, religion and affects in such constellations. In research-intensive courses you will collaborate with renowned research groups in the fields of migration studies, in the history of capitalism, knowledge and religion, material culture, emotions, and environmental humanities. The programme also offers you the possibility to explore and train skills in digital humanities techniques, and e-Humanities approaches.

WHY STUDY AT VU AMSTERDAM?
Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam offers a thorough training program, with individual guidance by excellent and committed supervisors.

“The MPhil History has been a great and instructive time! It allows you to develop yourself, and prepares you for a PhD position – or a position outside of academia.” Wouter de Vries, Student of the Global History programme.

“The MPhil History programme is aimed at talented students who are exceptionally motivated to do historical research. You will learn to investigate the dynamics and long-term developments of the global interconnection of goods, ideas and people, and the role of power, religion and affects in such constellations. In research-intensive courses you will collaborate with renowned research groups in the fields of migration studies, in the history of capitalism, knowledge and religion, material culture, emotions, and environmental humanities. The programme also offers you the possibility to explore and train skills in digital humanities techniques, and e-Humanities approaches.

WHY STUDY AT VU AMSTERDAM?
Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam offers a thorough training program, with individual guidance by excellent and committed supervisors.

“What I particularly liked about the VU is the personal and professional support of the faculty. You can assign yourself a mentor from the specialists in your field, who will help you design your Masters programme and find your way in academia.” Wouter de Vries, Student of the Global History programme.

You are encouraged to make use of the staff’s intensive network of heritage institutions, governmental organizations, NGO’s, and business partners, to set up embedded research projects as a stepping stone for the next step in your career. We offer a dynamic international context where students from the Netherlands and from abroad exchange views and experiences.

CAREER PROSPECTS
Investing in a research master has proved to be very profitable for our students over the years. You can continue as a PhD student, embark on a career at a research institute, a teacher, journalist, text writer, heritage expert, or an advisor for the government or NGO’s.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS
Applicants must have a Bachelor’s degree in history, European studies, anthropology, political sciences, or a related academic degree. The student should also have a proficient level of academic English, proof of excellent study results (7.5 average) and a clear motivation for academic research.

The Global History programme is aimed at talented students who are exceptionally motivated to do historical research. You will learn to investigate the dynamics and long-term developments of the global interconnection of goods, ideas and people, and the role of power, religion and affects in such constellations. In research-intensive courses you will collaborate with renowned research groups in the fields of migration studies, in the history of capitalism, knowledge and religion, material culture, emotions, and environmental humanities. The programme also offers you the possibility to explore and train skills in digital humanities techniques, and e-Humanities approaches.

WHY STUDY AT VU AMSTERDAM?
Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam offers a thorough training program, with individual guidance by excellent and committed supervisors.

“What I particularly liked about the VU is the personal and professional support of the faculty. You can assign yourself a mentor from the specialists in your field, who will help you design your Masters programme and find your way in academia.” Wouter de Vries, Student of the Global History programme.

You are encouraged to make use of the staff’s intensive network of heritage institutions, governmental organizations, NGO’s, and business partners, to set up embedded research projects as a stepping stone for the next step in your career. We offer a dynamic international context where students from the Netherlands and from abroad exchange views and experiences.

CAREER PROSPECTS
Investing in a research master has proved to be very profitable for our students over the years. You can continue as a PhD student, embark on a career at a research institute, a teacher, journalist, text writer, heritage expert, or an advisor for the government or NGO’s.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS
Applicants must have a Bachelor’s degree in history, European studies, anthropology, political sciences, or a related academic degree. The student should also have a proficient level of academic English, proof of excellent study results (7.5 average) and a clear motivation for academic research.

The Global History programme is aimed at talented students who are exceptionally motivated to do historical research. You will learn to investigate the dynamics and long-term developments of the global interconnection of goods, ideas and people, and the role of power, religion and affects in such constellations. In research-intensive courses you will collaborate with renowned research groups in the fields of migration studies, in the history of capitalism, knowledge and religion, material culture, emotions, and environmental humanities. The programme also offers you the possibility to explore and train skills in digital humanities techniques, and e-Humanities approaches.

WHY STUDY AT VU AMSTERDAM?
Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam offers a thorough training program, with individual guidance by excellent and committed supervisors.

“You are encouraged to make use of the staff’s intensive network of heritage institutions, governmental organizations, NGO’s, and business partners, to set up embedded research projects as a stepping stone for the next step in your career. We offer a dynamic international context where students from the Netherlands and from abroad exchange views and experiences.

CAREER PROSPECTS
Investing in a research master has proved to be very profitable for our students over the years. You can continue as a PhD student, embark on a career at a research institute, a teacher, journalist, text writer, heritage expert, or an advisor for the government or NGO’s.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS
Applicants must have a Bachelor’s degree in history, European studies, anthropology, political sciences, or a related academic degree. The student should also have a proficient level of academic English, proof of excellent study results (7.5 average) and a clear motivation for academic research.

The Global History programme is aimed at talented students who are exceptionally motivated to do historical research. You will learn to investigate the dynamics and long-term developments of the global interconnection of goods, ideas and people, and the role of power, religion and affects in such constellations. In research-intensive courses you will collaborate with renowned research groups in the fields of migration studies, in the history of capitalism, knowledge and religion, material culture, emotions, and environmental humanities. The programme also offers you the possibility to explore and train skills in digital humanities techniques, and e-Humanities approaches.

WHY STUDY AT VU AMSTERDAM?
Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam offers a thorough training program, with individual guidance by excellent and committed supervisors.

What I particularly liked about the VU is the personal and professional support of the faculty. You can assign yourself a mentor from the specialists in your field, who will help you design your Masters programme and find your way in academia.” Wouter de Vries, Student of the Global History programme.
Through intensive training and supervision you will learn to write a research proposal for (inter)national science foundations, and learn to design and position an innovative humanities research project.

Global History is a specialisation of the Humanities Research Master.

More details on the programme, admission, application and scholarships: Department of Art & Culture, History, Antiquity. Faculty of Humanities Prof. dr. Inger Leemans EMAIL: i.b.leemans@vu.nl

LEGEND:
- Obligatory for all students of the VU Humanities Research Master
- Obligatory for all students of the Global History Research Master specialization
- Courses in the MA History programme
- Optional courses: summer / winter-school at a National Research School, international research period, tutorial